Robert Shaw lights up. And why not? His recommendation that the student co-op project be postponed was passed in yesterday's meeting of the Senate sub-committee on Residence Policy, despite a Students' Society proposal recommending go-ahead on the project.

Co-op put off 1 yr.

by Nigel Gibson

The Senate Sub-Committee on Residence Policy yesterday recommended that any decision on whether or not to build the projected student co-op be postponed until the next academic year.

The recommendation is a grave setback to the Students' Society that considers the construction of the co-op an essential step in solving the serious financial problems of the Society.

The meeting was highlighted by a debate between Students' Society Internal Vice President Kevin O'Connell and Dr. K. S. Gunn of the office of Planning and Development and author of the Gunn report on residence occupancy and forecasts.

O'Connell submitted a paper prepared by the Internal Affairs Department of the Students' Society, in cooperation with the student representatives on the Residence Policy Sub-Committee, criticizing the Gunn report as being "an insufficient basis for a final decision on the co-op."

The position paper stated that the Students' Society believed "that the data presented in the Gunn report only highlighted the problems presently existing in McGill residences today" and it went on to say that "if anything the report raises some fundamental questions regarding the present direction and policies of the University residences."

O'Connell stated that the Gunn report "is slanted towards the present residences and does not take into account the most attractive features of the co-op."

The position paper also took issue with one of the main conclusions of the Gunn report, that the co-op would further reduce the occupancy of the existing residences.

This has been the main reason for the reluctance of the Administration to go ahead with the project, as it fears that any worsening of the occupancy problem could result in the closing down of parts of the residence complex.

The Students' Society position paper stated that "it has definitely not been proven to any degree that the co-op would draw off more residents from the University," reasoning that the co-op would be attractive to more than just McGill students.

The position paper concluded by stating that "the Students' Society believes that the Gunn report does not adequately account for either the present Residence enrollment situation nor does it deal adequately with possible future developments with-in and without McGill."

Dr. K.S. Gunn then attempted a defence of his beleaguered report by stating that "my report was not really intended to have any bearing on the student co-operative at all, but rather I intended it to be restricted to the residence situation."

Large turnout for history election

by Arnold Bennett

Charles Robert, BA3, picked up 534 votes in the History Department Steering Committee elections to lead the five winners yesterday. Seven candidates ran for the available positions.

The others elected were Kerry Riley, BA4, Brian Schechter, BA4, Alistair Saunders, BA4, and Alan Freeman, BA3.

Philip Aspler, now a graduate student, is the only member of last year's steering committee who did not run for office this year, but rather helped in the organization of the election. Simon Cuttler, BA4, also on last year's committee, was defeated.

Pensketches of the seven candidates and ballots were circulated in all history classes last week. Students were asked not to vote in more than one class, but there was no check on identification.

Although the Senate Committee for the Continuing Review of University Government has been meeting for a year now, some of its members still seem to be unsure of whether they want a uni-cameral system of government or a bi-cameral one like that which exists at the moment.

Two of SCRUG's members, Professor Virginia Douglas of the Department of Psychology and Steve Strasser BCL 1, have carried out thorough research on the uni-cameral system and yet the committee is still discussing the necessity for student and faculty representation on decision-making bodies of the university.

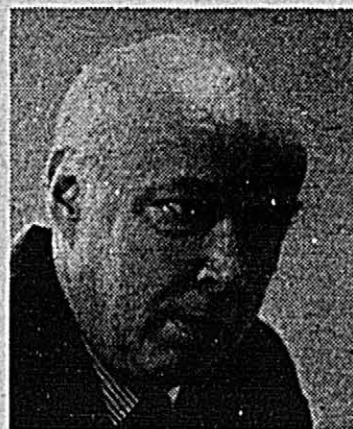

This is surprising since the committee submitted an interim report to the Administration approximately three weeks ago in which it recommended faculty participation in decision-making.

The question was raised at a meeting yesterday when SCRUG and Department of Physiology chairman, Professor D.V. Bates, asked the committee if decisions on academic matters should be made without reference to the faculty.

Professor Douglas pointed out that there was no question of whether the faculty should be included or not, as far as the committee was concerned, since such participation had already been discussed and recommended.

Howard Ross, Dean of the Faculty of Management, who was invited by the committee to give them the benefit of his experience in university government, said that he did not

Howard Ross

Academic, administrative functions do not mix believe academic and administrative functions could be mixed.

"If you relieve an academic of some of his lectures so that he can make administrative decisions, then he ceases to be an academic," he argued.

The members of the committee were also unable to agree on the composition of an executive committee for the proposed uni-cameral body. Governor Carl Goldenberg suggested that the faculty would not like "lay interference" with academic matters and so there should be no laymen on the proposed body.

When it was brought to his notice by Strasser that the Board of Governors is composed of laymen and yet is the supreme governing body of the university, he claimed that the B of G does not have a say on academic subjects. He clarified his statement by adding that, although the B of G does have a veto, the power is seldom exercised.

Governor Goldenberg, who was there in the capacity of advisor, further expressed dissatisfaction with the size of a uni-cameral governing body. "What scared me about Toronto was the size; I believe there were 60 members," he said, referring to a University of Toronto study of the feasibility of a uni-cameral structure which has been submitted to the Ontario government.

Professor Douglas maintained that the same problem exists under a bi-cameral system since the Board of Governors depends on Senate for decisions. "We steering committee is discussion of the implementation of a three-year plan for the History Department in the face of the introduction of the McGill CEGEP.

The question of the orientation of the department will be raised — whether it will be toward the undergraduates or toward graduate studies. Also to be considered is the distribution of faculty members among courses, and to what degree they should engage in teaching.

At present the History Department is unique in that senior faculty members, including Department Chairman Robert Vogel, teach first and second year courses.

The student representatives who were elected want to encourage the continuation of this policy, as well as asking for tutorials for credit.

A department source stated that there would be no problem about the maintenance of this orientation as long as Professor Vogel remained Chairman. "The Department functions because of the good will of Vogel, who keeps all parties satisfied."

The Executive of the Students' Society urges students in all faculties to contribute to the East Pakistan Relief Fund, whose headquarters can be found on the fourth floor of the University Center. Financial assistance, clothing and blankets are desperately needed. Manpower and transportation for the purpose of picking up donations are also required, especially this week-end.

The Executive gives its full endorsement and support to this fund. It has provided rooms, typewriters, telephones and some publicity. The need is great and urgent. Telephone numbers are 843-8894, 392-8918, and 845-6484.

Another modest proposal

Sir,
It is truly reassuring to note that McGill is continuing its program for extending the sidewalk - a magnificent gesture towards pedestrian freedom. However, we feel that the design should be modified since cars encounter great difficulty in negotiating the change in level at the sidewalk/roadway interface during the parking phase. We observe with delight the foresight of the administration in anticipating the future resurfacing of the roadway which will raise the vehicular thoroughfare and hence facilitate the positioning of all four tires on the sidewalk. (A good example of the desired result is observable at the general crossroad near the MacDonald Engineering Building where a car can park entirely on the sidewalk thus leaving the roadway free for students to walk on.)

We would further suggest that the program be continued to provide an even greater width of sidewalk to permit cars to actually drive along them as well as park, thus freeing the roadway entirely for pedestrian use.

Ultimately, we feel that McGill should take a positive policy towards progress by encouraging the use of the automobile in providing even more parking on campus. As there is continuous expense in maintaining the campus in its present state (eg. cutting grass, raking leaves, planting flowers, etc.) we propose a modest capital expenditure for chopping down the trees and paving the entire lower campus area. By our calculations, this investment could be regained within only two years, and provide parking space for all staff members and perhaps even a handful of students.

Only when pedestrians are completely removed from the sidewalks, can automobiles be assured of a safe place to park.

Council candidates announced

by Donna Balkan

The names of the candidates running in this year's Council elections have been released by co-Chief Returning Officer Dave Sprague.

There are eight nominees for council seats from the Faculty of Arts and Science. They are: Ashley Hilliard, Connie Isenberg, Michael Montgomery, Dayle Moseley, Barb Shamy, Stephen Sibalis, René Sorell and Max Wolpert.

The candidates from the Faculty of Commerce are Charles Hirschfield and Peter Chodos.

Putting themselves forward from the Faculty of Engineering are Jimmy Chi-Ping Chang, Kim Hin Pang, and Irving Kuperman.

Law Faculty Candidates are Steven Strasser and Timothy Denton.

Candidates from four faculties have been elected by acclamation. These are Shirley Beattie, from Physical and Occupational Therapy, John Newton from Religious Studies, Peter Tannenbaum from the Faculty of Music, and Joel Berger from the Faculty of Dentistry.

The nominations for Council representatives from the faculties of Nursing, Architecture, Education, and Medicine have been extended until 4 pm today.

A meeting was held yesterday for all Council candidates to review the election by-laws of the McGill Students' Society, and to answer any questions concerning campaigning. The by-laws for this year's elections are similar to those of previous years.

However, no posters are to be placed on the table in the lobby of the Arts building as they had been in previous elections. Another stipulation regarding the campaign is that candidates require permission from the professor before making speeches in a particular class.

The elections will be held on Wednesday, December 2. There will be 17 polls, most of them open between 9 am and 4 pm.

GOBLIN

If that Halloween mask happens to reflect the way you feel, the reason might be as simple as the wrong sanitary protection. Maybe you're just suffering from a case of an uncomfortable sanitary pad and belt.

The remedy is a simple one: internally worn Tampax tampons. They can't give you that ugly feeling because, very simply, you can't feel you're wearing them. And they don't show. In fact, there's nothing to cause you discomfort or embarrassment. No matter what your costume is.

Tampax tampons are easy to carry in your pocket or purse. Easy to use. Easy to dispose of. And very easy to get used to.
